Oil on the Troubled Waters.
Some interesting experiments have been made at the site of the proposed Harbour of Refuge, Dungeness Point, by Captain the Hon. H. W. Chetwynd, R.N., District Inspector of Life-boats, in the direction of testing the value of oil in calming rough water. There was a sufficiently heavy sea at the time of the experiment to endanger a small open boat, and the Dungeness lifeboat, the David Halett, was launched, and anchored in five fathoms of water. A small canvas bag, containing about half-a-gallon of oil, and pierced with several holes with a large needle, was attached to the anchor as a buoy. This had the effect of producing a space of still water spreading from the buoy to a distance of about twenty yards wide, and of considerable length. Every breaking sea that reached the oily surface immediately fell dead, and passed by in a harmless roll. Some were seen to reach the oily surface, the parts on each side of the space continuing to break, whilst the part encountered it came on unbroken, and apparently not so high as the breaking part on each side. The boat was then brought in and anchored close at the back of the break on the beach to try the effect of the oil in that part, but the quantities of oil available, though sufficient to break the outside, had not sufficient power closer to the shore. These trials are considered satisfactory, but not conclusive, and it is stated that they will be continued.

"Your visit remind me of the growth of a successful newspaper," said Uncle Jabez, leaning his chin on his cane and glancing on William Henry, who was sweet on Angelica. "Why so?" inquired William Henry.
"Well, they commenced as a weekly, grew to be a tri-weekly, and have now become daily, with a Sunday supplement."
"Yes," said William Henry bracing up, "and after we are married we will issue an extra."
"Sh-h," said Angelica, and then they went out for a stroll.

A Philadelphia gentleman travelling abroad writes that he and a friend stopped at a small cafe in the suburbs of Paris for refreshments. Their repast was a light one, consisting of tea, toast and eggs, but the bill was a heavy one, nine francs in all.

"Garcon!" exclaimed one of the tourists, "how's this? Please explain."
"Well, you see, messieurs," apologized the waiter, "two francs for the tea and toast and seven francs for the eggs."
"Ah, then, eggs are very scarce about here?"
"No, monsieur, eggs are not scarce, but Americans are!"
